“The Love and Passion of a Very Few People.”

Lynn Huntley, Esquire.

Lynn Huntley is the President of the Southern Education Foundation, one of the leading institutions in the U.S. working for equity, justice and improvement in public education in the U.S. She has previously served as an Assistant U.S. Attorney General for Civil Rights, and a program office for the Ford Foundation.

Her address will explore the role of philanthropy and the nonprofit sector in troubled times. She will examine challenges to leadership, pressing issues, and the importance of all people of good will coming together to serve the common good for the purpose of building a just, civil society. She will ask us to think more deeply about the obligations of nonprofits to society at large in times (like these) when working for the common good is more important than ever.

Michael Useem is Professor of Management and Director of the Center for Leadership and Change at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania. He is author of several books on leadership, including The Go Point: When It’s Time To Decide and The Leadership Moment; and he has studied and consulted with leaders in nonprofit as well as for-profit organizations. Dr. Useem will examine the requirements for leadership in an unpredictable world. He will explore the ways leadership depends on fostering a culture throughout the organization that places a primacy on personal responsibility, professional achievement, and successor development. Drawing on moments when organizations confronted challenging times, Michael Useem focuses our attention on the capacities that make the difference whether leading a team, group, or organization.

SAT/11:30 A.M.–1:00 P.M.LUNCHEON & CLOSING PLENARY (Liberty C)“Civil Society and Philanthrocapitalism: Partners or Antagonists?”Michael Edwards

Michael Edwards was for many years the Program Officer for Civil Society Program at the Ford Foundation, a post he left this summer. He is now a Distinguished Senior Fellow at Demos in New York and a Visiting Senior Scholar at New York University's Wagner School of Public Service. He has authored several well-respected books and numerous articles on civil society. Dr. Edwards has a new, provocative book out on the subject of his address. He will encourage us to look at all aspects of some of the more potent new trends in philanthropy. He will challenge us to think more critically about what's new and what's not, and about what is beneficial and what's not, in the blurring of sectoral boundaries, the intertwining of business with philanthropy.
