WELCOME

FROM THE ARNOVA PRESIDENT

Dear Colleagues,

It is my great pleasure to welcome you to Indianapolis for ARNOVA's 41st Annual Conference. After months of planning and hard work by many people we are really excited to have this gathering unfold now. We think this will be a very special conference this year.

ARNOVA serves its members in a variety of ways all year round. We publish NVSQ, we provide information and help people connect with one another via our website, and we reach out to the wider nonprofit community through ARNOVA-L, social media, and a range of small but useful projects. So much of what we do is accomplished by electronic means it seems our existence is mostly 'virtual.'

Nonetheless, there is a special sense of opportunity, energy and creativity when we have the occasion to gather in person, face-to-face. Here we will see old friends, find new colleagues, and explore ideas and work that could lead to new learning, enhance our teaching, and result in more fruitful approaches to strengthening civil society and the nonprofit sector.

Our Conference Planning Committee and the Local Arrangements Committee have worked hard to put together a Conference that should have something for everyone. There will be occasions to be challenged and informed and to explore new ideas in the paper sessions. We hope every session will offer some chance for genuine dialogue. In addition, our plenaries are designed to inform and promote a public conversation about the core concepts we engage in our research and teaching, and to probe how the meaning and practice of "philanthropy" has been changing and why. Finally, meals and special events are designed to create the social space where all of us can experience the benefits of bringing people together from varying backgrounds and perspectives to learn from and appreciate one another.

We know as we plan these Conferences that the most important ingredient for success is the energy and readiness to engage in open and thoughtful conversations that you, our members and participants, bring to this gathering. We hope that our long-time attenders will reach out to newcomers, and newcomers will feel free to ask questions of anyone they meet. Know that ARNOVA's staff and volunteers on the conference committees are glad to answer questions or be of help in any way we can. And please know how grateful we are for your participation in and contribution to this event. We hope this is a great experience for you.

Sincerely,

Roseanne Mirabella
President

WELCOME

FROM THE ARNOVA CO-CHAIRS

Dear Colleagues,

It is our pleasure to welcome you to ARNOVA's 41st Annual Conference. You will see that a great deal of effort has gone into creating a full and deep program for you. However, we could not do it without you. We know much of the richness of the Conference experience comes from the energy, intelligence, curiosity, and readiness to engage in dialogue that each of you bring to this event, so we thank you for your participation.

This year's Conference in Indianapolis occurs in one of the early seedbeds of the development of the fields of philanthropic, nonprofit and voluntary action studies. The Center on Philanthropy at Indiana University was one of the first research and teaching centers for our field(s), and it is our privilege to take this occasion to share in the celebration of their 25th Anniversary.

In relation to that occasion, it seemed to us a public conversation built around "Re-examining Philanthropy: Exploring the Core Concepts our Field(s)" could be fruitful now. So many new ways of conceptualizing philanthropy, the social sector, social enterprise and the public good have emerged in recent years, this is an opportune moment to explore these ideas more deeply, and to consider the ways they differ and the ways they cover common ground.

Our opening plenary on Thursday afternoon will provide an occasion to share in just such an exploration, looking at how philanthropy is changing and what forces may be at work. Our closing plenary on Saturday will offer a chance to hear a story about how a major philanthropic initiative in one community - the Cultural Trail here in Indianapolis - was framed to try to meet a number of hopes for community betterment simultaneously, and what lessons can be learned from that effort.

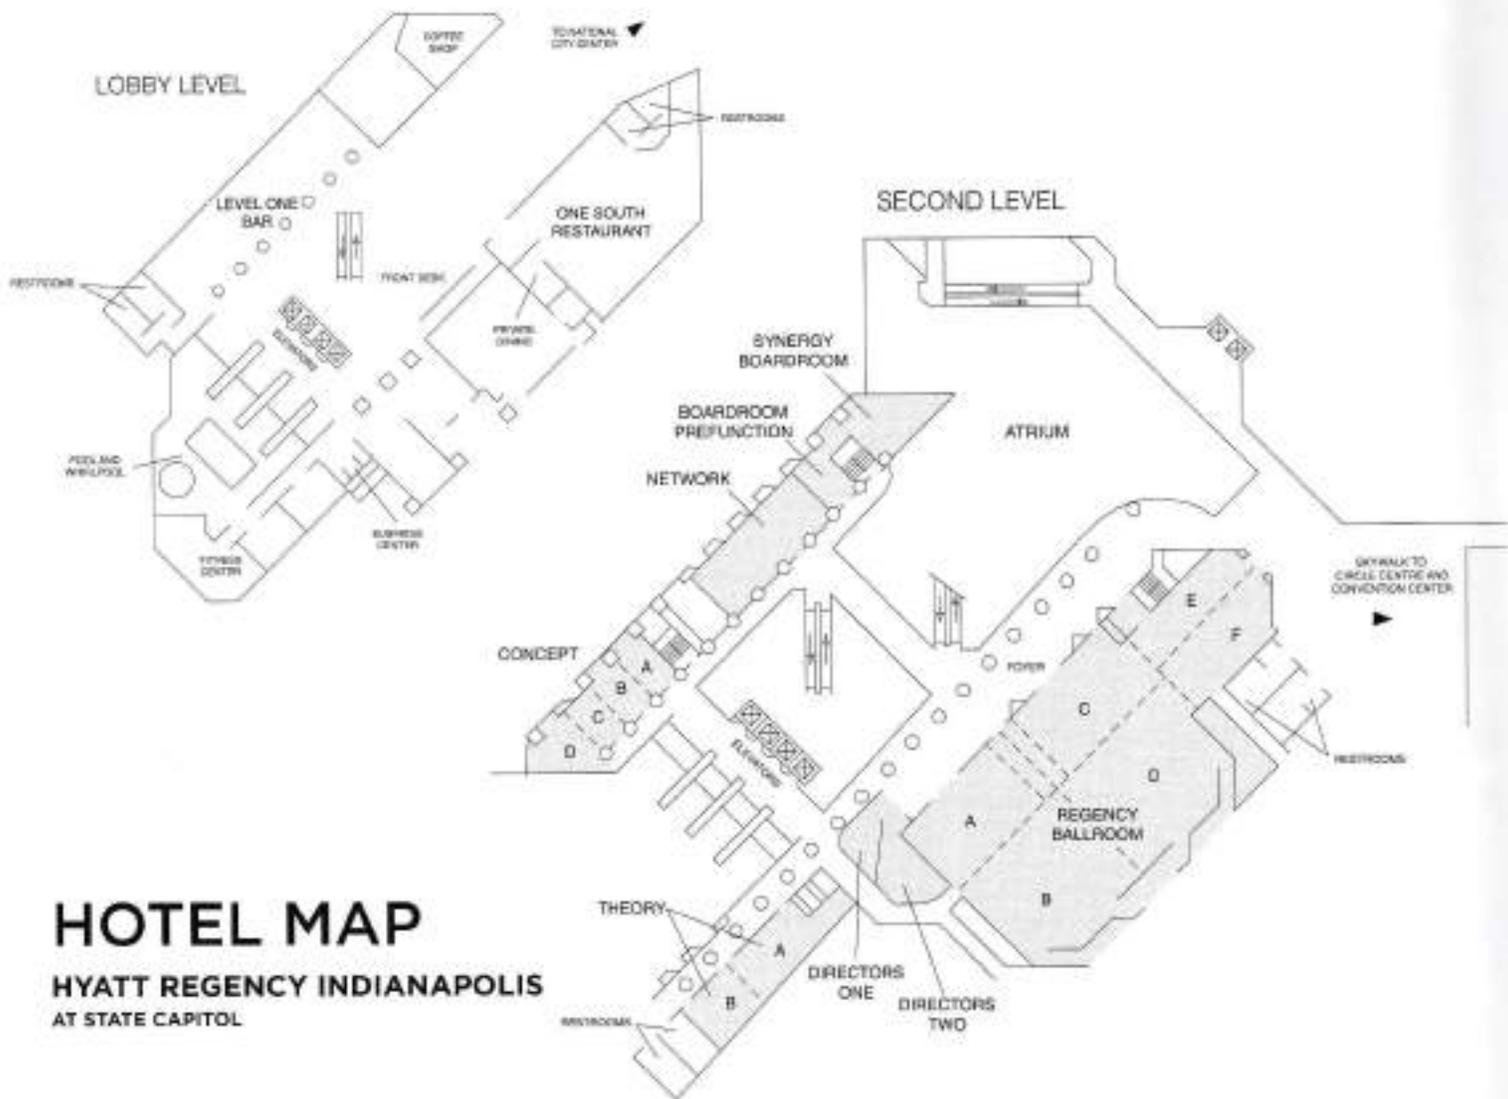

This year, we have changed the format of our Thursday lunch to incorporate the business meetings of our many sections. The sections are a great way to meet other scholars interested in similar research and to get involved with ARNOVA. We encourage you to check out a section meeting on Thursday—everyone is welcome.

In between Thursday morning and Saturday noon we know there will be a myriad of interesting and useful conversations occurring. Some will happen in the sessions; others over meals; in the social media sphere; and still others in quiet corners of our spaces here. So as we begin, we thank you again for what we know each one of you brings to enrich this event, and trust you will go home enriched yourselves by your participation.

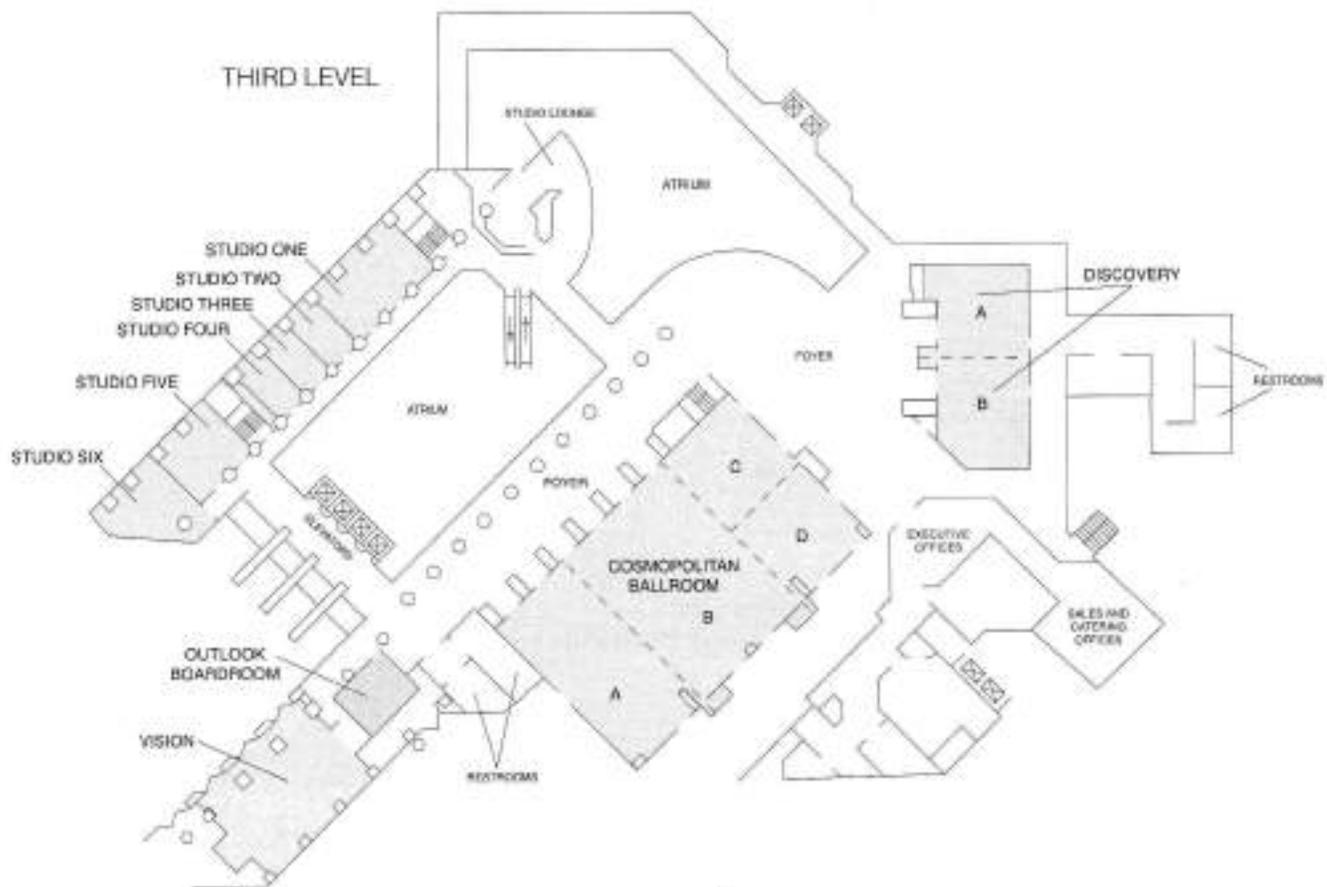

Sincerely,

Jessica Sowa

New NGO & Philanthropy Titles from

In NGO Leadership and Human Rights, Ghere argues that the human rights and development communities need to communicate and interact with each other much more effectively than is the case at present. In particular, leaders of human rights and development NGOs need to "get on the same page" in terms of both theory and practice.

Confronting Power provides an academically rigorous, yet practical and comprehensive framework and concepts for planning, implementing and evaluating policy advocacy. The book grounds the concepts via a series of case studies, which themselves illustrate a range of different advocacy campaigns in both the Global South and the United States. Designed to be both a textbook and a guide for practical action, Confronting Power should become an essential component of every teacher and social advocate's tool kit.

Pre-Conference Seminar

Developing Faculty Intercultural Competency and Communication Skills

The purpose of this Teaching Section workshop is to provide ARNOVA members with a professional development opportunity in the area of intercultural competency and communication. Specifically, this workshop is designed to improve participants knowledge and skills in order to better prepare them to teach on issues of cultural diversity and to enhance their ability to meet the needs of their diverse students. Using a framework by Dr. Milton Bennett known as the Developmental Model for Intercultural Sensitivity (DMIS), participants will be invited to take a journey with the presenter that explains how one's experiences of difference contribute to his or her own orientations toward cultural difference and commonality. The DMIS model will be introduced. Aggregate data from the Teaching Sections pilot intercultural competence development initiative will be presented to demonstrate a mapping exercise of the pilot participants' aggregate experiences of difference along the intercultural development continuum. Information on how one can further enhance her or his intercultural competency depending on one's experience will also be introduced.

Pre-Conference Seminar

Philanthropy: Self-Serving Narcissism or Kindly, Moral Act?

Is philanthropy an act with moral overtones---for instance, the love of mankind, involving an active effort to promote the well-being of others? OR: Can, or should, philanthropy be reduced more simply to a financial gift/grant transaction? Does the source of the funding really matter (ill-gotten gains?) or the motivation of the giver (prestige, recognition?).

Philanthropy is complex and involves values, various motivations, economic considerations, and social roles, to name a few factors. The purpose of this session is to provide an opportunity for a thoughtful and extended discussion that can help us question what we may take for granted, in order to come to a better understanding of the concept of philanthropy and its boundaries.

Announcing the first Not-For-Profit Distance Learning Simulation

(For Higher and Continuing Education)

Simulation Description

Not-For-Profit Management Simulations, Inc.

A Distance Learning Leadership and Not-For-Profit Management Strategy Simulation

Contact:
8571 SW 61 st Court
Ocala, FL 34476

Phone: 352-843-8998

Email: rbhouse@simulationhouse.com

Website: www.simulationhouse.com

The Not-For-Profit Management Simulation (2011) is an online web instruction course that has the option of being supplemented with classroom meetings and digital lectures. The not-for-profit simulation course allows the student/participant the opportunity to exercise management decisions in a realistic, community-based, service environment.

As the simulation is designed to prepare managers of not-for-profit organizations, the model organization includes both human service and business functions; the performance outcomes are defined and quantifiable. The model for the simulation is a community rehabilitation organization that has service programs and a business component; it is representative of many types of human service organizations.

Evaluation comment from previous student:

"This was a challenge. I learned more about problem solving and how to apply what I know in this simulation than in any course I ever had."

ROCKEFELLER COLLEGE OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS & POLICY

UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY
State University of New York

Nonprofit management is a high priority growth area for Rockefeller's Department of Public Administration and Policy.

The College has hired three new nonprofit faculty in the last three years and has begun a major curriculum redesign. The College's location in the Capital Region of New York State – home to over 3,000 nonprofits – offers exceptional opportunities for faculty to engage with the nonprofit community and New York's public sector. New faculty receive a course release in the first year and a start-up research support budget. Research support is available from several sources at both the department and University levels.

Rockefeller's MPA program is consistently ranked among the nation's top 20 by U.S. News & World Report
