WELCOME

FROM THE ARNOVA PRESIDENT

Dear Colleagues:

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to ARNOVA's 46th annual conference and to Grand Rapids, Michigan, a city known for its creative energy and combination of urban flair, Midwest roots, and the natural beauty of the Grand River. As a Michigander in my youth, I enjoyed the city's museums, parks, restaurants, and other amenities. Now known as a city for great craft beer and boutiques, I have more to enjoy. Most of all, I look forward to joining you in Grand Rapids for our engaging community and the thoughtful conversations our conference facilitates.

Our conference co-chairs, Jennifer Moseley and Mary Kay Gugerty, track chairs, and numerous other volunteers including the Local Arrangements Committee led by Michelle Wooddell and Teri Behrens worked tirelessly to put together an array of opportunities for us. The conference program demonstrates that this is truly a member-driven event that reflects our members' talents, interests, and generosity of time and effort. The backbone of the conference is the ARNOVA staff ably led by Executive Director Shariq Siddiqui. I would be remiss if I did not mention Mary Kate Myers, our conference coordinator, for keeping us on schedule and taking care of the numerous details and logistics that go into an event of this size and variety. Thanks to all!

Conference co-hosts are Grand Valley State University and the Dorothy A. Johnson Center for Philanthropy. Kudos to the Johnson Center for all the success it has achieved in "putting research to work" for 25 years. Our conference reflects the commitment of co-hosts to give us the time and space to reflect on the theme of "Strengthening Local Communities: The Role of Nonprofit and Philanthropic Organizations." I am confident that as we engage with one another during and between sessions we will gain new insights related to this theme along with ideas to strengthen our professional activities.

My thanks for this conference extend beyond our co-hosts to our institutional and individual member supporters. Our major philanthropic supporters this year are Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, Ford Foundation, Kresge Foundation and The Lilly Endowment. We deeply appreciate their investment in our work. They are not alone in investing in ARNOVA. The program brochure includes the names of all those who are helping this conference through philanthropic and other contributions—this support is much appreciated.

ARNOVA is pleased to partner with the Alliance for Nonprofit Management for the second year in a row. The Alliance is holding their conference at the same location and time as the ARNOVA conference. ARNOVA members are free to attend Alliance sessions and Alliance members can attend ARNOVA sessions. The membership of the Alliance includes practitioners and foundation executives who seek to further practice through research. Please look for an Alliance member and welcome them to ARNOVA.

This conference will mark the end of board terms for Alan Abramson of George Mason University and Dwight Burlingame of IUPUI. Alan has served us very well as ARNOVA's President and Past-President of ARNOVA, in particular by initiating our strategic planning process and overseeing growth in awards and partnerships. Dwight has expertly stewarded ARNOVA resources as a very engaged and thoughtful treasurer and executive committee member. Their leadership has left us stronger as an organization and community. I will miss their astute contributions during ARNOVA board and committee meetings. At the same time, I warmly welcome Angela Eikenberry of the University of Nebraska Omaha and Thad Calabrese of New York University to the board and know their voices will add much to ARNOVA's governance team.

I hope you enjoy the conference and its setting. The ARNOVA board is committed to the ARNOVA conference being a "must attend" meeting that leaves participants refreshed and energized. We welcome your recommendations about how to make our conferences even better. Please feel free to email me at tshirhart.2@osu.edu or Shariq Siddiqui at ssiddiqui@arnova.org with any suggestions.

Sincerely,

Mary Tschirhart, The Ohio State University

WELCOME

FROM THE ARNOVA CO-CHAIRS

Welcome to ARNOVA's 2017 Annual Conference! We meet in Grand Rapids, Michigan under the conference theme of Strengthening Local Communities: The Role of Nonprofit and Philanthropic Organizations. We are gathering at a time when the role of civil society organizations in bolstering resilient communities is more important than ever. We convened last year in Washington, DC in the wake of a divisive U.S. election, uncertain about what the future would bring. A year later, the same political debates rage on, while many communities are struggling with civil unrest or the devastation of natural disasters. At the same time, societies around the globe are wrestling with difficult issues of identity, equity and inclusion.

As scholars and practitioners, we know the critical role that philanthropy and the nonprofit sector has to play in addressing community needs. In our work, we are called to find ways to support inclusive, equitable participation across our communities. ARNOVA's visit to Michigan provides the opportunity to reflect and learn from well-regarded place-based approaches to philanthropy as well as to consider how strengthening and building the resilience of local communities can strengthen the overall fabric of civic life.

While the current challenges seem daunting, during our time together we will see many examples of initiatives that have addressed social and economic challenges in meaningful ways. In our opening plenary, featuring a panel of foundation executives, we will hear how philanthropic communities are finding new ways to work together to address institutional inequities, such as the crises in Flint and Detroit. Our closing plenary, featuring sociologists Marshall Ganz and Hahrie Han, examines the challenge that increasingly concentrated wealth poses to equitable and inclusive civic associations.

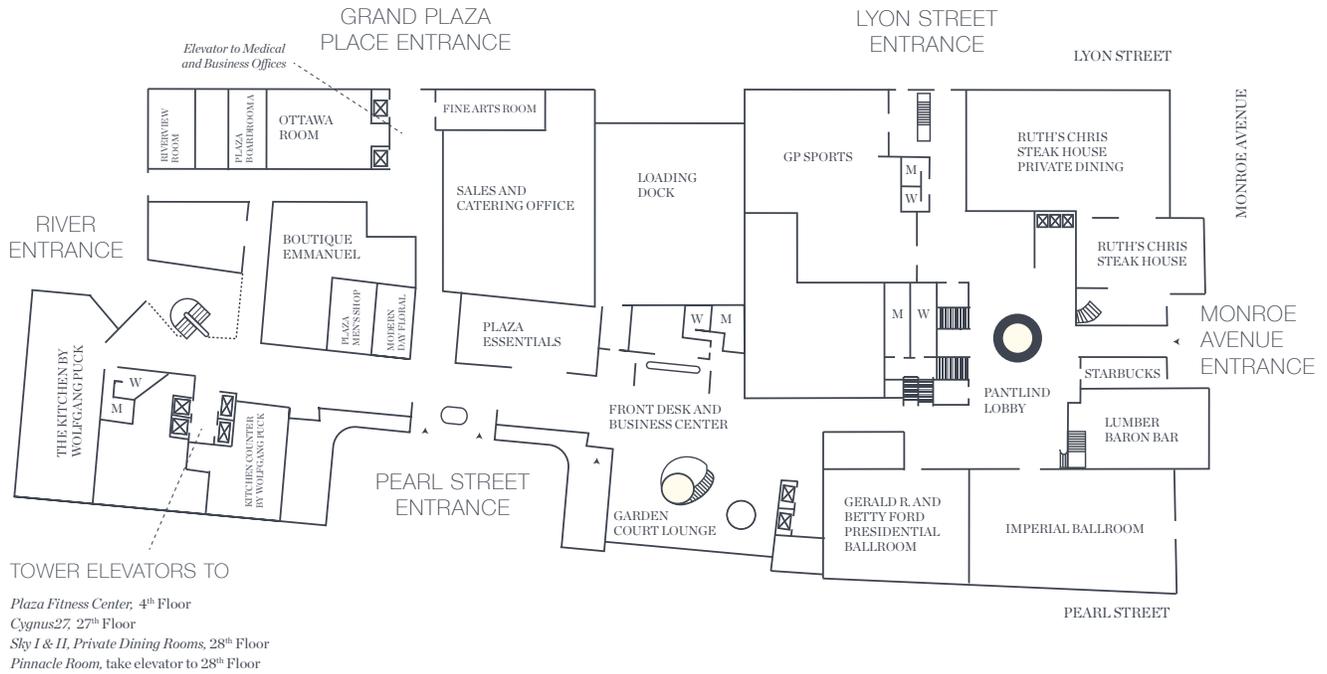

While our sessions represent the diverse range of interests and expertise brought by our members, the conference theme this year explores the particular role played by nonprofit organizations in supporting community-focused and place-based efforts to build the social good. A number of sessions examine the causes and consequences of these developments, especially in relation to policy and partnerships with government. The conference has a robust selection of 530 papers, 35 panels, and XX colloquia grouped into 14 substantive areas. We also feature a new presentation model—the lightning session, where scholars present mini-overviews of their work and cross-paper discussion is facilitated. Building on successful innovations from the last few years, this year we feature five mini-plenaries, in addition to the opening and closing plenary. Several of these mini-plenaries explore important topics related to the conference theme, such as developing anti-racist organizations, the role of nonprofits in confronting climate change and environmental justice, and the connections between NGO and domestic nonprofit research. Others feature cutting edge work on the assessing the health of the nonprofit sector and the winners of the awards given this year at the conference.

We have also continued to expand the number of professional development sessions at the conference, part of the ongoing effort to ensure ARNOVA remains a welcoming, inclusive community for scholars and practitioners of all backgrounds. These innovations and the conference itself would not have been possible without the selfless service of many ARNOVA members and we know that that new members and regular attendees will notice their effort. Thank you for attending the ARNOVA conference and for strengthening the association through your research and service.

Sat / 10:00 am to 11:30 am	Closing Plenary: Civic Associations, Government, and Democratic Renewal Ambassador Ballroom Liberal democracy can be viewed as a promise that equality of voice can counterbalance inequality of resources. Civic associations, in turn, have played a key role in the struggle to make that promise real by enabling individuals to discern where common interests lie, learn practices of self-governance fundamental to democratic practice, and aggregate their voices to make them heard. Today, many see this promise in serious jeopardy as the influence of concentrated wealth has reached beyond private firms into both political and civic domains. SPECIAL SESSIONS AND MINI PLENARIES

ARNOVA has put together a number of special sessions that focus on professional development at all levels. Additionally there will be 4 mini-plenary sessions that explore a number of current issues and recognize a number of ARNOVAN's who have impacted the field and our organization.

MINI PLENARIES

All will take place Friday, November 17 from 2:00 pm – 3:30 pm

Climate Change and the Civic Sector

Atrium

Climate change is the defining policy challenge of contemporary times. Nonprofits and advocacy organizations (NGOs, in short) play an important role in climate change policy. This session will explore the role of the NGO's in this arena.

Chair: Aseem Prakash, Professor, UW Political Science

Panelists:

Beth Gazley, Professor, SPEA Bloomington

Chris Kolb, President & CEO Michigan Environmental Council

Bill Wood, Executive Director, West Michigan Environmental Action Council (WMEAC)

Race, Power, and Privilege: Where We've Been and Where We Need To Go

Pearl

This mini-plenary highlights the work that has been done and needs to be done next to enable scholars, practitioners, and students in the field to critically think about race, power and privilege.

Panelists:

Angela M. Eikenberry, University of Nebraska at Omaha

Jennifer A. Wade-Berg, Kennesaw State University

Shariq A Siddiqui, ARNOVA

Chao Guo, University of Pennsylvania

Toward an Index of the Health of the Nonprofit Sector

Imperial

Join a discussion about how we can work together to develop a high-quality index that provides a timely indication of how the nonprofit sector is doing.

Chair: Alan Abramson, George Mason University

Panelists:

Jodi Benenson, University of Nebraska-Omaha

Patrick Bixler, University of Texas-Austin

Elizabeth Castillo, Arizona State University

Roland Kushner, Muhlenberg College

Sarah Pettijohn, University of North Carolina-Charlotte

Elizabeth Boris, Urban Institute

So Close, Yet So Far: Obstacles and Opportunities in Research on Nonprofits and NGOs

Gerald Ford

This plenary questions what keeps nonprofit studies and NGO research fields separate; whether there are now better organizing principles than “domestic” and “international”; and what theories and innovations in data and methods that one field might learn from the other.

Chairs:

Mary Kay Gugerty, University of Washington

Allison Youatt Schnable, Indiana University

Panelist: Carrie Oelberger, University of Minnesota

Presenter: Matthew Baggetta, Indiana University

Recognition of Award Winning Scholarly Research

2nd ANNUAL ARNOVA–AFRICA/AROCSA CONFERENCE, 2018 POLITICAL LEADERSHIP AND REGIONAL COLLABORATION IN AFRICA

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF CAIRO, EGYPT

July 26–28, 2018

arnova.org/arnova_africa | Questions? conference@arnova.org

Have Africans entered a new season with visionary political leaders who can deliver on promises? Which mechanisms – national or regional, have enabled political leaders to amend institutions to preserve their personal interests at the expense of national or regional development? Have civil societies worked cross boundaries, in their efforts to solve regional problems and engage political leaders in their efforts? What is the role of competition (perceived or real), in shaping relationships between political leaders as well as civil society actors within regions? These and many other questions are what we seek to find answers to.

Political leadership in Africa in recent years, has, in some cases inspired Africans to hope for a better, more stable political and economic future, while in other cases, it has elicited disappointment because of a trajectory towards a past characterized by unhealthy political leadership and economic hardship.

Some scholars have advocated regional integration along economic dimensions, with scant attention paid to the specific role and impact of political leadership in the success of regional collaboration. At the 2018 ARNOVA-Africa/AROCSA conference, we look forward to discussing regional relationships beyond economics, and how such collaborative efforts can influence mutual support and sharing of best practices amongst leaders. We look forward to discussing how regional political leaders can inspire and support each other to lead the region and continent in a direction that serves Africa well, and the various roles that civil society actors can play, across borders.

We welcome paper and poster submissions that examine theoretical models and frameworks that explain, describe and predict relationships between political leadership, good governance regional collaboration and, determinants of success in governance, and the relevance and impact of a supportive cohort of political leaders. Ultimately, the discourse should lead to new research that is relevant to the theme.

We look forward to providing an on opportunity for practitioners to share their lessons, especially concerning how they, as civil society actors, have worked to push an agenda of regional collaboration and how they have led efforts to build the political leadership capacity in their specific contexts. Beyond the sharing of “best practices”, there is the opportunity to attempt replication of models and over time, concretize successful models of political leadership and shared, positive regional growth.

We will also engage in conversations about the role and influence of African Philanthropy in regional efforts to build and safeguard good political leadership and regional collaboration towards problem-solving.

The Research Infrastructure of Chinese Foundations An Open Data Project for Your Research

A major challenge for studying the nonprofit sector in China is the lack of data for empirical studies. The Research Infrastructure of Chinese Foundations (RICF) is an open data project of Chinese foundations, civil society, and social development in general.

The database schema consists of three major themes: foundations' basic organizational profile (e.g., name, address, and board member), program information (e.g., program description), and financial information (e.g., financial position and cash flow). RICF's methodology is peer-reviewed by the experts in the field and published in *Scientific Data, a Nature Research journal. For more information about the methodology, please visit doi:10.1038/sdata.2017.94

RICF also provides funding for nonprofit studies about China. For more information, please visit <http://ricf.org.cn/>

2018 ARNOVA-Asia Conference

Evolving Government-Third Sector Relations in Asia

Hong Kong | June 27-28, 2018

Call for Paper Abstracts and Panel Proposals

www.arnova.org/arnova_asia

With the growing awareness of the importance of collaborative governance and civic engagement in public affairs, nonprofits and philanthropy (which connotes both giving and volunteering) have become important vehicles for harnessing societal contributions to advance social good. The third sector not only contributes additional resources and new ideas to cope with complex social problems, but more importantly creates potentials for social innovation. Such a promise, however, has important implications for public governance as well as the operation and development of the third sector. This conference addresses issues involved in the evolving government-third sector relations in Asia, with a focus on the changing roles of the third sector in public affairs, and their implications for nonprofit management, philanthropic practice, and volunteering.

We are calling for papers that advance the theoretical understanding of factors activating and shaping the changing dynamic between government and the third sector, and the implications of the change for public governance and the sector's development. We encourage diverse theoretical approaches and methodologies including both qualitative and quantitative research; and also studies with a focus at the individual, organizational or sectoral levels. As we strive to bridge the academic and professional communities in the study and practice of nonprofits and philanthropy, we also welcome proposals for discussion panels by practitioners which address the opportunities and challenges they face amid the changing government-third sector relations. For these practitioner-oriented sessions, innovative modes of presentation and discussion are encouraged; they may be short presentations on case studies to provoke thoughts and discussions, panel discussions of best practices, or provocative talks. Roundtable sessions in which academics and practitioners share their views and experiences of seizing the opportunities and meeting the challenges are also welcomed.

We hope that, through the scholarly and professional exchanges at the conference, academics, nonprofit executives, philanthropy practitioners, social entrepreneurs, and policymakers can take the challenge of coping with the changing government-third sector relations seriously, and collaborate to meet the challenge.

Visit arnova.org/arnova_asia for more information. Submissions of paper abstracts and panel proposals should be sent to arnovaasia@hku.hk.

TIAA Nonprofit Leadership Fellows.

The TIAA Nonprofit Leadership Fellows Program is shaping the next generation of nonprofit leaders.

The collaboration between TIAA, the leading financial services firm for nonprofits and philanthropy, and the Do Good Institute, housed in the School of Public Policy at the University of Maryland is geared toward students pursuing a master's degree in public policy, with a specialization in nonprofit management and leadership.

Our unique, world-class curriculum enables students to delve deeply into the complex challenges facing nonprofit leaders, formulate innovative strategies, and graduate with strong leadership skills and professional experiences. Each TIAA Nonprofit Leadership Fellow receives substantial financial support and professional development opportunities.

Do you know a student who possess exceptional leadership potential and has the passion and drive to change the world through a career in nonprofits and NGOs? Interested applicants must apply for the Master of Public Policy or Master of Public Management program at the School of Public Policy and for the Fellows program by January 17, 2018.

The Do Good Institute.

Housed in the School of Public Policy, University of Maryland

The Do Good Institute is a campus-wide hub that provides education, opportunities, research and resources to develop the next generation of nonprofit leaders, social innovators and civic-minded students.

The Institute's model has seen compelling success: it recently won the 2017 Voinovich Public Innovation Award at the Network of Schools of Public Policy, Affairs, and Administration (NASPAA) conference for its Do Good Campus, two University of Maryland alums have been named to Forbes list of top 30 social entrepreneurs under 30, and Jiahuan Lu (PhD '14) has been awarded 2017 Editors' Prize for the best article of the year in Nonprofit Management & Leadership.

Through the School of Public Policy, students can pursue graduate and undergraduate degrees and programming in nonprofit management and leadership and social innovation, including:

- MPP/MPP-MBA/MPM, with a nonprofit specialization
- Graduate Certificate in Nonprofit Management and Leadership
- Ph.D., with a nonprofit specialization
- Bachelor's degree, with a focus in Nonprofit Leadership and Social Innovation
- Minor in Nonprofit Leadership and Social Innovation
- Fellowship Programs with the Washington Regional Association of Grantmakers and TIAA

The Alliance for Nonprofit Management presents

THE NUTS & BOLTS OF PROFESSIONAL INTERIM EXECUTIVE MANAGEMENT

A one-day workshop for seasoned leaders interested in supporting organizations in transition

Learn from national thought leaders with decades of on-the-ground experience: As leaders of the Alliance's Executive Transition and Leadership Continuity Affinity Group, Tara Levy and Lynne Molnar are two of America's foremost thought leaders on interim executive leadership in nonprofits.

You'll benefit from their direct first-hand experience as interim executives, as well as the wisdom they've gleaned as program leaders responsible for interim placements. They have developed this training drawing from the experience and skills they've gained from training hundreds of interim executives.

They will be joined by other experienced interims including the interim executive director of the Alliance, Marissa Q. Paine and Mary Vradelis of Sequoia Consulting Associates.

THE WORKSHOP LEADERS:

Lynne Molnar (left) is a Principal of Molnar Consulting. She has an MBA from Boston University and an Ed.M. from Harvard.

Tara Levy (right) is an experienced trainer and consultant on nonprofit leadership and management. She is a graduate of the University of Texas and has a JD from The University of Texas School of Law.

Interim CEOs offer critical leadership to help nonprofits build their capacity in a transition. In addition to providing bridge leadership during an executive transition, interims set the stage for success in the future. Interims can be called on to...

- Provide an important timeout following a charismatic or controversial leader
- Guide organizations through a turnaround
- Stabilize organizations who experienced a traumatic departure
- Model good executive behaviors before an organization hires its first CEO

The possibilities are endless, but the role of the interim is as much about transformation as it is good executive leadership. Today, interim executive leadership represents both a specialty practice for nonprofit consultants as well as a new work-life balance option for seasoned career nonprofit leaders.

Are you cut out to be an interim? The best interims are seasoned leaders with the experience and confidence to jump into ambiguous situations. They are leaders whose first impulse is to understand, serve and guide.

Interim work is a specialty that shouldn't be jumped into blindly.

Invest a day – discover the secrets for success. Interim executive leadership is a craft with its own ethos, best practices, tools and approaches. This full-day workshop will cover lessons learned from nearly two decades of experience across thousands of successful (and some not so successful) transformational interim executive assignments.

Here's what you'll learn:

- The role of the interim as a transformational capacity builder.
- Best practices for preparing an organization during executive transition.
- A step-by-step approach for completing a successful interim assignment.

Annual Capacity Builders Conference

November 15 - 18, 2017 Grand Rapids, Michigan
Online registration is available until 11/18/17

Welcome to the 2017 Alliance for Nonprofit Management National Conference held concurrently with the Annual Conference of ARNOVA (Association for Research on Nonprofit Organization and Voluntary Action). To our first time attendees and to our long-term members, thank you for coming and for bringing your knowledge, perspectives, and experiences with you to share with your peers and colleagues.

As we come together for these few days, we know we are at a crossroads politically and culturally. With the threat of funding cuts hanging over the social sector and open divisions around diversity, equity and inclusion, these are trying and divisive times. However, this year's conference, Strengthening Local Communities: The Role of Nonprofit and Philanthropic Organizations, affords us an opportunity--as a community--to gather, connect and process how our work supports strong, diverse and inclusive communities.

Our joint conference represents the opportunity to convene those interested in the field of capacity building and to make our work and our collective message more powerful. It is our time to come together, to reflect on our field, to reaffirm our commitment to equity and inclusion, engage in difficult conversations and learn together. It is also represents the opportunity to be exposed to research, case studies and cutting-edge thinking in the field, to be exposed to new ideas, and to bring those ideas into our own work and efforts.

Our four-day conference includes more than twenty Alliance-curated sessions, trainings, and gatherings; a membership meeting; a regionally focused Alliance lunch; and the Terry McAdam Book Award Ceremony. For the pre-conference Alliance-only day of programming, we will have the opportunity to learn more about member interest and affinity groups and/or to dive in more deeply with an affinity group of our choosing. There are also social opportunities woven throughout our time together to experience the Grand Rapids foodie scene and to strengthen or forge new bonds that have always been a hallmark of the Alliance.

Lastly, let's all take a moment to thank our amazing conference committee, the Board of directors, staff and our member affinity groups for their tireless efforts in making this event possible. Let's all make a commitment to tweet, post and link throughout the conference. We can use the hashtag #ACONF17 so that our constituencies back home and across the country can participate in our conversation!

On behalf of the Board of Directors, the conference committee and staff, welcome, and let's all be sure to leave energized, refreshed, and excited to continue to contribute to the field and to our local communities.

About Us

The Alliance for Nonprofit Management is the national voice and catalyst for the field of capacity building.

Our mission is to increase the effectiveness of the individuals, groups and organizations that help nonprofits and communities achieve positive social change. We create spaces for professional dialogue and learning by amplifying research in the field and promoting its implications for effective practice.

We are a knowledge community whose power lies in our inclusive and active chorus of members.

We are consultants, coaches, funders, academics, and executives from across the country.

We believe that quality research and practice need each other—that each lens and pursuit should inform and affect the other. That's why it's so important to break down the silos, and share and synthesize what we know for the betterment of all.

We want all those who are interested in improving their practice to exchange perspectives and to translate and apply research; and we want to promote and inform research that offers insights into the field of capacity building, whether academic, field-based, practitioner-led, or Alliance-led.

Together, we can better advance our individual pursuits, the field of capacity building, and the social change it critically supports.

Programs

Learn, share, discuss, discover and create—together.

Member Affinity Groups are our most valuable resource and means of advancing the research and practice of capacity building.

Affinity Groups self-organize around a specified interest or identity with the primary purpose of innovating ideas, practices, models, research and/or publications. They also provide a space for Alliance members with similar interests to network with each other, exchange ideas, and develop their skills.

To join an Affinity Group, log in to the Member Center by visiting www.allianceonline.org

Currently, we have Member Affinity Groups focused around:

- Capacity Building Organizations (CBO)
- Executive Transition and Leadership Continuity (ETLC)
- Governance
- People of Color
- And more groups coming soon!

Member Affinity Groups

Capacity Building Organizations (CBO)

The purpose of the CBO Affinity Group is to advance the knowledge and practices of capacity building among nonprofit organizations whose missions aim to strengthen the nonprofit sector. Our work includes: exchanging best and next practices that advance the effectiveness of our work; identifying strategies and models that are sustainable; advocating for capacity building and related funding with philanthropy and government; and sharing breakthroughs in research or practices that advance the field.

Affinity Group Leaders: Keith Timko and Patty Oertel

Executive Transition and Leadership Continuity (ETLC)

With more than 100 members, ETLC is a professional community of capacity-builders who focus on strengthening nonprofits by creating human resource solutions and developing human capital to lead the sector. This Affinity Group sees its work as a pioneering and trail-blazing effort to develop methodologies, reinforce good practices and identify research needs that promote leadership continuity within nonprofit organizations by planning for positive leadership transitions, attracting and retaining outstanding professionals for the sector, developing future generations of leaders within the sector, and advocating for and teaching succession planning as fundamental to an organization's capacity to benefit society.

Affinity Group Leaders: Mary Vradelis and Catherine Bradshaw

Governance

The Governance group provides a forum to forward creative thinking in the field of board governance and development, including the generation of new approaches and models for community-based organizations. Through sharing of new approaches, practices, and research among a diverse group of consultants, capacity building organizations, and researchers, this affinity group hopes to not only further the field, but also to increase the knowledge base, generative thinking, and consulting skills of its members.

Affinity Group Leader: Judy Freiwirth

People of Color

Formed in 2001, the POC group offers a forum for capacity builders of color to share experiences and work to expand the presence of people of color in the Alliance and in the field. They seek to catalyze change in the field, the nonprofit sector, and ultimately the larger society by accelerating peer learning, challenging business-as-usual, and generating ways and means to honor the journey of people of color in the Americas through capacity building practices.

Affinity Group Leader: Jose Dominguez and Curdina Hill

Coming Soon: Race & Equity, Consulting Practice Development and Young Professionals

These groups are being formed based on expressed member interest. If you are interested in launching another new group, please contact us or submit an idea in the Members: Idea Bos.

The Center for Nonprofit and NGO Studies

A unique program with endless opportunities

NIU's Nonprofit and NGO Studies program prepares future leaders who want to make a difference in the world. Our undergraduate interdisciplinary program is among only a select few in the United States. We recently changed our name to better reflect our purpose and have a new director to achieve high levels of excellence as part of the School of Public and Global Affairs.

The Center for Nonprofit and NGO Studies offers services and programs to nonprofit organizations and engages in original research. We believe that the nonprofit sector is vital to society and it is essential to work with organizations and conduct research that promotes growth within the field.

THE 2017 TERRY MCADAM BOOK AWARD

Through the Terry McAdam Book Award, the Alliance for Nonprofit Management celebrates the year's most outstanding book published in the nonprofit sector. Since 1989, the Terry McAdam Book Award has been given to books that are innovative and inspirational in their discourse on nonprofit management, governance or capacity building. The award was created to commemorate Terry McAdam, who was passionate about the role of the capacity building field in increasing the impact and effectiveness of the nonprofit sector.

Thank you to the dedicated members of the 2017 Terry McAdam Book Award Committee for their tireless work throughout the year in reviewing, discussing and selecting this year's award recipient.
